‘Eurasian Monitor’ is the sociology of the huge space and great NATIONS, cultural polyphony and social mosaic of the Northern Eurasia in terms of research and analysis.

We conduct sociological research in the subcontinent of Northern Eurasia that includes almost twenty countries with the population of 300 million people, united with common history but different in their religion, languages and culture.

We collect and analyze a variety of social data on Northern Eurasian countries populations as we believe in the importance of the comparative studies.

Our goal is to represent cultural diversity and cover the social mosaic of the Northern Eurasia and the emerging Greater Eurasian Partnership in sociological terms.

ABOUT US

WHO WE ARE

‘Eurasian Monitor’ is the Association of research companies in the Northern Eurasia.

The idea of cooperation emerged at a meeting of representatives of expert and analytical centers from Belarus, Kazakhstan, Russia and Ukraine, that was held in Kiev in March 2004.

In February 2006 the members of the research consortium registered a non-commercial partnership named as International research agency ‘Eurasian Monitor’.

In accordance with the changed legislation of the Russian Federation, in December 2018 the non-profit partnership was transformed (and re-registered) into the International non-profit association of research companies ‘Eurasian Monitor’.

Currently, the Eurasian Monitor consists of 10 organizations, that are regular members of the Association, from 7 countries of the Northern Eurasia. Moreover, research teams from the other Northern Eurasian countries participated in some of the Association’s projects.

The main line of research of the Eurasian Monitor project is the regular measuring a number of indicators reflecting social sentiments of Northern Eurasian countries population by conducting every year (or more often) synchronized mass surveys of adult citizens (18+) of these countries using a common toolkit (questionnaire).

Each member country conducts nationally representative survey for the sample of 1050-2000 people.

The common questionnaire comprises two modules:

- the regular (constant) module includes questions on subjective well-being, attitudes to the different branches of government and integration attitudes;
- the rotating (thematic) module consists of questions devoted to a particular topic varying from survey to survey (e.g. ideological values, humanitarian interests, cultural connections and so on).
